The Harvard Drug Group issues voluntary nationwide recall of certain Rugby brand eye drops supplied by Velocity due to potential risk of eye infections

At Prime Therapeutics Management, we want to help you receive the best possible care. Visit PrimeTherapeutics.com/DrugRecalls to review the latest FDA drug recalls.

About this recall:

The Harvard Drug Group, doing business as Major® and Rugby®, is initiating a voluntary recall for all lots (batches) of polyvinyl alcohol, 1.4% lubricating eye drops (NDC 00536-1325-94) and lubricating tears eye drops (dextran/hypromellose, 0.1%/0.3%; NDC 00536-1282-94) supplied by Velocity to the consumer level. The recall is due to insanitary conditions in the manufacturing facility and positive bacterial test results from sampling of drug production areas.

These products are available over the counter for temporary relief of discomfort due to irritation of the eye or due to exposure to wind and sun. The eye drops also protect against further irritation and can relieve dryness of the eye.

What this means to you:

For those patients who use these products, there is a risk for eye infections that could result in partial vision loss or blindness. These products should be sterile. Eye drops have a higher risk as applying to the eyes bypasses some of the body's natural defenses.

Consumers should stop using the recalled eye drop products and may return any of the above listed products to the place of purchase. Consumers with questions regarding this recall can contact Sedgwick by phone at 866.891.1981, 8 a.m.–5 p.m. Eastern Standard Time (EST) or by email at HarvardDrug8430@Sedwick.com. Consumers who have signs or symptoms of an eye infection after using these products should talk to their health care provider or seek medical care immediately.
